Rather, it reflects changes in the economy and changes in mail use patterns. It reflects an infrastructure that exceeds customer needs and costs that are beyond our authority to control. The issue is not the value of the mail. Despite the vast technological changes over the last decade, the mail still is a vital channel for financial, business, and personal communications. It is a conduit for trillions of dollars in transactions each year. It is one of the most trusted services in America and one of the most effective. It offers unsurpassed value, and we are working to increase that value each and every day. At the end of the day, though, through focused and complementary efforts, we can protect a vital and vibrant national postal system. The Postal Service must and will continue to bring efficiency and service to even higher levels. Together, we must identify a new business model, one that supports success in a new business environment, and we must close the huge gap between our revenues and our costs. S. 1507 will offset part of that gap. Increased efficiency will narrow the gap even further. And with the ability to change from 6-day to 5-day mail delivery, we can not only eliminate that gap, but return to profitability without placing any financial burdens on the American taxpayer. It will take hard work. It will take creativity. It will take co-operation and good faith on...
